

OVERVIEW

Continuing Education and Professional Development (CEPD) is a process by which health professionals maintain, update, develop and enhance their professional skills, knowledge and attitudes. CEPD is an on-going process of formal and informal education, in-service training, learning and support activities in which health professionals take part ensure provision of quality care to meet individual and their communities' changing health needs.

In this spirit of dedication to best practice and a desire to act and serve wisely and well, this booklet is designed, issued to and used by all dietetic professionals who are registered with the Allied Health Professions Council of Zimbabwe to record CEPD activities they undertake each year.

At the end of each year practicing dietitians are expected to submit evidence of their participation in the CEPD system. If a practicing dietitian fails to submit this booklet for review at the end of the year, it will be assumed they did not take part in any CEPD and as such they will not be able to renew their practicing certificate for the following year with the Allied Health Professions Council.

Should this professional continue to fail to take part in CEPD activities for two consecutive years, they will be removed from the AHPC's register.

Practicing dietitians working in rural or remote areas will be given special consideration if they cannot attend CEPD activities. They are required to submit a statement to the Board outlining their peculiar situation and requesting dispensation
